Written Evidence

Sustained Investigation

Identify the question(s) or inquiry that guided your sustained investigation.

Response:

Exploring the theme of school-related stress using sculpture. I used recognizable objects that symbolize various stressors to create three-dimensional structures. Through the repetition of these objects, I reinforce the symbolism of stress and capture the feeling of being overwhelmed. To offer a moment of reprieve from the stress, I introduce a secondary object that creates distortion or change in the initial object or aggregation, symbolizing a break or a new perspective. These moments of reprieve offer a message of hope and resilience in the face of adversity.

Describe how your sustained investigation shows evidence of practice, experimentation, and revision guided by your question(s) or inquiry.

Response:

To offer hope and resolution, I also identified secondary objects as symbols of change or relief, and created physical test models to experiment with different methods of aggregation and distortion. Through a process of learning from mistakes and revisions, I refined the composition and makeup of my sculptures to convey my intended message more clearly. I also tested fabrication methods to ensure clean craftsmanship, resulting in a final model that offers a powerful exploration of the impact of school-related stress.
